URGES ADJUSTMENT OF BUSINESS TO CHANGES

KEEP PACE WITH TIMES

Susceptible Attitude of Mind Essential to Success, He Tells Machine Company Guests.

That business and the business man must adjust themselves to the rapidly changing industrial, mercantile and social conditions in order to keep pace with them and take advantage of the opportunities which are coming to the world today, was the admonition of Dr. David Beaton of Chicago, and formerly of the First Congregational church of this city, to the annual banquet of the machine company last evening at the Myers hotel. Dr. Beaton's talk was a wonderfully comprehensive and human feeling presentation of the human feeling between employer and employee of which he spoke.

"Greater changes have come about," he declared, "since the beginning of 1914 than have been seen in the full hundred years before that time, despite the development of countries, the growth of commerce and the industrial revolution. In the next twenty-five years the world will see changes that are beyond the mind of man to predict at this time. Already they have begun to appear, and we must adjust ourselves to them. Business and the business man must develop the right attitude of mind."

Dr. Beaton had chosen for his subject, the effect of war on business. He would not confine himself entirely to this. The biggest thing in life, after all, is a man's daily life. He can't live in high altitudes for long, and a business man must look at the common everyday things that determine what you are. No man has a right to be tempted away to some of the bigger, broader things until he has made a success of his everyday business, until he has demonstrated that he is capable of taking over the big things.

"It is a great mistake to start out with a critical attitude. That is the most corrosive thing in human nature. Look at things in a more genial light. Don't think that you can make every one believe as you do. Develop a personality in your work. If you aren't aimed, all the energy you expend is worthless."

"In America the business man is representative of the nation and as in the development of the country the great thing is the creation of an individuality, so with the man, each must develop his own personality. Without it business may be no more than haggling, but with personality business is raised to the plane of financial negotiation, and this is the success of business positions because they have presentable personalities; the successful man is the one with the big personality."

When this was being said, up he with a critical attitude. That is the most corrosive thing in human nature. Look at things in a more genial light. Don't think that you can make every one believe as you do. Develop a personality in your work. If you aren't aimed, all the energy you expend is worthless."

"We are at war. That must be realized by every citizen. There are all classes in this war; it is not a war of military men. It is a war of people. That is the characteristic fact that will go down in history. It is your war. There is not a man who has a single quail of conscience about who is not false to his American citizenship. It is the war of each and every one of us, of your children, and of your children's children. It is your duty to be enthusiastically in support of your government."

"Our is a representative democracy with a definite organ for expressing the opinion of the whole people—the congress and the president. And when the organ has declared war, the individual has the right to say that he will not obey that law, and when the distinguished senator from Wisconsin declared that the question of war should be put up to a vote of the people, he portrays his ignorance of the nature of the government of the country. This is a representative democracy. It is not a democracy to make the laws, they are not up to the people individually, and the law is each man's duty, and the individual should not be a condemned fool in pointing out the effect of the war on business. Dr. Beaton declared that already in England, and probably in France and Italy as well, there have been half a dozen things that have been revolutionized. Social suffrage, he cited, is but one of these. It did not come about as a matter of sentiment, but as a direct result of the fact that there are three hundred thousand women employed in the munitions industries in England.

"A democracy," he declared, "cannot allow one class or one to fight its battles and claim the privileges due a fighter. Everyone must fight. You are the noblemen, you are the fighters, you must live up to the privileges that are yours. That one thing is revolutionary. Changes like that, like the conscription of labor and of wealth, make a new world to live in. Take the matter of the machine company business. There can be no such thing as passing a law making a part between nations to punish Germany to restrain her from doing business. But human emotion will make a big difference. Germany has been a socialized autocracy; she has been using her wealth and her resources to spread her domination throughout the world. She had injected her money into South America. Today she has lost these markets; after the war is over the question of foreign trade will be a big one. We must grow to understand that, in our mental attitude, keep pace with the changing conditions."

"The question of citizenship has been one of the very real revelations of the war, one that is vital to every American. Since the civil war we have been indifferent to citizenship and its necessity in a democracy. There are people who have been living here for thirty years who are not citizens, and they with their children, when war comes, are at heart aliens, are traitors to this country. The trouble is we have not known what citizenship American citizens mean. People have been more loyal to their religion, to their race, to their party, to their ideas, than they have to the duty to the country; it must be changed. Your loyalty must be absolute and unconditional. Yet there are millions in this country who believe otherwise. We have now the crisis of making a homogeneous nation, of creating one people with but one allegiance."

The banquet was served to more than nine hundred in the main dining room of the Myers, where American flags and the flags of the allies had been used for decorations. With a few opening remarks, J. A. Craig, the master of ceremonies, presided over the president of the company, T. O. Howe. Following Dr. Beaton's address, M. G. Jeffris was called upon and made a stirring appeal for the Liberty bond, urging the salesmen of the company to do their utmost throughout their territory in spreading publicity and pointing the necessity of the loan. Music was furnished during dinner by Bob Dalley and M. Sullivan.

TRY BELOIT WOMAN FOR GRAND LARCENY

Evidence in Beloit Larceny Case Is Taken in Municipal Court This Morning and Afternoon.

Additional testimony in the case of Mrs. Betrick of Beloit, who is charged with grand larceny of money in the municipal court this morning before Judge Maxfield and a twelve man jury which was drawn Friday afternoon. Mrs. Betrick is charged by Mike Hepp, a Beloit man, with stealing $300 dollars from his room while he was away.

Heon was on the stand this morning and gave his version of the case and told of his having left the money in his room before he went away. He thought of the money and returned to get it and found Mrs. Betrick in his room and the money gone.

Atty. Adams of Beloit appeared as attorney for Mrs. Betrick and questioned Heon. Following this District Attorney Dunwiddie took charge of the examination of the witness.

According to the story of money, he had saved the money with which to purchase a second hand automobile. In order to get an organized story from Heon, it has been necessary to keep an interpreter from Beloit in the court at all times to return his answers to the questions.

MILTON BEATEN BY WHITEWATER NORMAL

First Game of Year Played by Milton College Results in a Defeat by Score of 28 to 0.

Milton college lost its first game of the season Friday afternoon to White-water normal at Whitewater by the score of 28 to 0 in a game lacking thrills. Whitewater scored one touchdown in each quarter, but could only kick two goals following the touchdowns.

Milton played in unusual form considering the fact that they have only been at practice for one week. The men played well individually, but the noticeable lack of team play was responsible for the defeat. Milton only had one chance to score in the entire game and that was when Currie intercepted a forward pass on Milton's twenty yard line and raced about forty yards before he was tackled. It looked for a time as if he had a clear field for a touchdown, but could not kick two goals following the touchdowns.

Two of the touchdowns made by Whitewater were the result of the breaks of the game, while the other two were earned. To start the game, Whitewater made a determined drive down the field, but the Milton men worked together and held the drive to the close of the quarter, when a forward pass netted the touchdown. Two of Whitewater's touchdowns were the result of forward passes.

The lineup of Milton college was as follows: Sutter, J.; Rakuska, R.; Curtis, R.; Reed, C.; Randolph, C.; Warner, R.; Talbert, R.; Oakley, R.; Ingalls, R.; Howarth, R.; Hillstrom, captain, R.

MORRIS NO LONGER TO BE CONSIDERED

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

New, Oct. 13.—Fred Fulton and Billy Miske between them have eliminated Carl Morris from serious consideration as a contender for the crown worn by Jess Willard.

The Oklahoma fighter, in dispute because of his rough fighting, seems to have finally slipped even as a mauler for Billy Miske, weighing far less than Morris, met him at that game and beat him up something scandalous.

Morris never was an invincible scrapper. Luther McCarth proved that more effectively than anyone else when he stopped Carl in Springfield, Mo., but Carl has been able to butt and slam his way through most of the opposition, hard enough at any rate to make him a serious obstacle in the path of most men who aspired to a bout with Willard.

Fred Fulton made himself decidedly unpopular in his New York meeting with Morris when he fouled his huge opponent and was disqualified. He made it worse when he began to cry after the bout that it was Morris who was fouled and that he was forced to quit. He was disqualified. His shouts were unheeded until he got Morris into a ring in Ohio and proved that Morris was a fouled fighter. Fulton won that fight and immediately hopped back into the spotlight.

Miske's victory must be taken with due deliberation by the fight fans, for it presages a return of the small but powerful fighter to the ring. Back in the days of Bob Fitzsimmons and John L. Sullivan it was contended that the ideal size for a heavyweight was under 200 pounds, but that has been forgotten since Carl in Springfield, Mo., little Jack Dillon almost proved, and Billy Miske seems to have taken up the cudgel. Guaged by these most recent happenings, it looks more and more as if Fred Fulton would have a more up to date fight than he has had in a scrap with Willard. And then, it wouldn't be laughable at all for Fulton if he were to meet Miske, for the St. Paul demon has proved his worthiness against a point to consider Miske in a bout with Willard, for Willard is much too huge for Miske to reach with any telling effect.

What is believed to be a new world's record for chances accepted in a single game of ball was established by Daubert, the Brooklyn first baseman, when he had twenty-seven putouts and four assists in the twenty-two inning battle with the Pirates. At least this is a latter-day record. In the famous twenty-four inning tilt between the Athletics and Red Sox in September, 1906, the longest game in major league history, none of the first basemen even approached Daubert's record. Grimsaw, of Boston, had twenty putouts and two assists. Davis and Schreck divided up the initial big labor for the Mack men. Harry had twelve putouts and an assist and Ossie sixteen putouts. The two together thus were two short of Daubert.

It is probable that Pider, of the Pirates, also had a new mark for fifteen putouts and four assists, a total of nineteen chances without an error. Only Daubert of the players in this game exceeded him.

One of the remarkable features of this battle was the good control shown by several of the pitchers. Jacobson walked only three men in seventeen innings, and Cheney only one in thirteen. Pittsburgh had twenty-two men left on the bases, which comes close to being a record, and Brooklyn was not far behind with thirteen. Bigbee, of Pittsburgh, was hit eleven times and made six hits, while Myers of Brooklyn, was up ten times and got five safeties.

Many of us have been under the impression that there'd be very little actual work for those ring champions and near champions who have volunteered to teach boxing to Uncle Sam's fighters, but that's the wrong hunch.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

It is difficult to analyze the workings of the human mind. Our best friends often surprise us with some sagacity, and we doubtless surprise our friends in the same manner, but what they or we may think has but little influence on the world at large because but few of us are leaders other in thought or action.

Occasionally, however, a man stands out in advance of the crowd and proclaims some startling doctrine, which by its very newness attracts the people, and if backed by a strong personality secures a following.

When Bowditch established his church, a time ago, he had trouble in finding a devoted people who believed that he was divinely appointed and so money flowed into his treasury in unstinted measure, and disciples flocked to his standard by the hundreds.

"The Holy Rollers," which disturb the landscape in various parts of the country, are the product of some fanatical leader who taught that zeal and emotion were evidences of a religious life and they cheerfully adopted his creed and are shouting their way to glory.

It is easy to understand how the devotees of the Holy Rollers and other sects of this class gain a foothold, because there is no insanity quite so contagious as religious insanity. Our emotional nature lies so close to the surface that it is easy to reach. It is a product of the heart, and the heart is an organ of impulse and not of thought.

But there are other fields where designing leaders secure a following with results that are more or less disturbing. A fraction of the unskilled labor of the country becomes restless and labor agitators like Haywood, of mine strike fame, take advantage of the situation and organization follows. The I. W. W. workers spring into existence and full-fledged anarchy confronts the nation.

The pacifists, just now, are attracting a good deal of attention, not so much because of individual effort, but because leaders like La Follette are thinking and talking for them. "Peace at any price" is the slogan, and the talk-fest goes on, in spite of the fact that there can be no permanent peace until German autocracy is destroyed. Russia has long been noted for a hatred of despotism and exiles to Siberia by the tens of thousands paid the penalty for disloyalty. The punishment may have been severe, but Russia is now in the throes of reorganization, and it is an open question as to whether or not the great mass of ignorant people can be made capable of self-government. The hand of a czar may not be necessary to bring order out of chaos.

The people of all lands are more or less like sheep. They find it easier to follow than to strike out for themselves, and so great leaders are in demand all over the world. The war has created an unusual demand for this class of men, both in military and industrial life.

When great emergencies arise, men are never lacking, and so the best brain of the world is employed today in attempting to solve the new and serious problems which war has created. History is making so fast that the work of these great leaders is not fully recognized nor appreciated, but future historians will do them full justice.

Many leaders are good and some are bad, but the worst that the world has ever produced is William the Second of Germany, familiarly known as "Kaiser Bill"—the greatest autocrat in the world.

Louis A. Sprague attempts to analyze the mind of this man in the current issue of Munsey's magazine. He finds that in spite of his arrogance and fanaticism that he has been able to defy the world for three years and more, and that his hold on the German people is still magnetic.

It is easy to understand how a strong-willed man can assemble a group of fanatics and cause them to do his bidding, but how any man can take a nation forty million strong, and handle it to suit himself is a mystery unsolved. He seems to have inspired his subjects with the belief that he is omnipotent, and in partnership with God, they are to conquer the world. He is surrounded by sycophants on all sides; for there lives a powerful ally, the old good God.

His pronouncement of the divine alliance appears in many of his earlier utterances, notably one at Berlin in 1897: "If we have been able to accomplish what we have accomplished, it is due to the fact that we consider that we have been appointed by God to preserve and direct for their own welfare the people over whom He has given us power."

"I consider myself an instrument of Heaven, and shall go my way without regard to the views and opinions of the day."

"All those who wish to help me in this work I bid hearty welcome, whoever they may be; but all those who oppose me in this work I shall smash them to pieces (screamingly)."

"You have sworn loyalty to me; this means, children of my God, that you have given yourselves up to me, body and soul; there is for you but one enemy, that is my enemy. In view of the present socialistic agitation it may come to pass that I shall command you to shoot down your own relatives, your brothers, yet, your parents—which God forbid—but even then you must follow my command without a murmur."

"The Kaiser's whole life seems to be held together and ordered by the belief that God is with him in everything that he does, that God is with Germany, and that he was put upon earth, anointed by God, to rule and to lead his army on to victory. The profession of a divine alliance, history proves, drags a man into terrible mistakes. His plays against destiny, with those fearful 'iron dice' to which Bismarck alluded. If he wins, he can have altars, as Augustus had. But if this certainty of a partnership, this intimacy with the Supreme Being, develops only into a 'chimera of disordered faculty,' then his fall will be from the heights.

"The Kaiser is a regular attendant at church. When he goes to the front he is accompanied by his own chaplain. He never goes into battle without kneeling in prayer. He gives each of his soldiers a Bible; he admonishes them to say the Lord's Prayer occasionally and always to trust in God.

"Yet the troops of this anointed ruler have devastated Belgium and turned away from their homes thousands of women and children. They have ruined, burned, and wantonly destroyed northeastern France, and when they retreated from the Somme they abducted women as young as fourteen. His submarines have sent to death women and children, helpless non-combatants; they have drowned wounded men and nurses by sinking hospital ships; and the emperor himself has decorated officers guilty of these murders. He has sent Zeppelins loaded with tons of explosives to bombard undefended English towns and villages, to destroy schools and churches, and to kill more women and children.

"To judge the Kaiser by his own utterances for these crimes against international law, against civilization, and against humanity, we can draw only one conclusion. Imperial Germany believes that the end always justifies the means, that William is anointed of Heaven, that he is a ruler by the grace of God and can do no wrong.

"How, too, shall we accept his protestations against war and his profession that he loves peace? It is impossible to reconcile these with his imperialistic ideas, his longing for world domination, his assertion of a divine alliance that will assure victory to his arms, and his exaggerated worship, his idolatry, of an army that he has made the mainstay of his empire."

The German nation has been under the domination of this arch-bi-aspens for thirty years. Loyalty and unquestioned obedience is bred in the bone. His deluded subjects are in worse state than the Russians because they are more intelligent. When peace is finally secured the German people will be among its greatest beneficiaries. God speed the day.

The socialists feel that it is a dreadful abuse of power that they can't have the use of the mails to help break up the government that keeps the mails running.

In these elaborate systems for saving fuel, nothing is said about getting out doors and exercising frequently so you won't need much heat anyway.

All you have to do to get a servant girl nowadays is to see to it that a picture theatre is established within five hundred yards of the house.

Just Folks

(By Edgar A. Guest.)

A LESSON FROM GOLF

He couldn't use his driver any better on the tee Than the chap that he was licking, who just happened to be me; I could hit them with a brassie just as straight and as true as I care. But I piled up several sevens while he made a few in par; And he trimmed me to a finish, and he knew the reason why. He could keep his temper better when he dubbed a shot than I.

His masher stroke is choppy, without any follow through. I doubt if he will ever on a short hole cop a two. But his puts are straight and deadly, and he doesn't even frown when he's tried to hold a long one and just fails to get it down. On the fourteenth green I faded, there he put me on the shelf. And it's not to his discredit when I say I licked myself.

He never whined or whimpered when a shot of his went wrong. Never kicked about his troubles, but just plodded right along. When he dubbed an easy iron, though I knew that he was vexed He merely shrugged his shoulders, and then coolly played the next. While I flew into a frenzy over every dub I made. And was loud in my complaining at the dismal game I played.

Golf is like the game of living it will show up what you are. If you take your troubles badly you will never play to par; You may be a fine performer when your skies are bright and blue. But disaster is the acid that shall prove the worth of you. So just meet your disappointments with a cheery sort of grin. For the man who keeps his temper is the man that's sure to win.

Alas, alack, that in the smack of the honest love the mite should lurk.

ROCKFORD PATROLMAN, DUAL TRAGEDY VICTIM

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 13.—John Gillogly, patrolman, was shot and instantly killed Friday night by Charles A. Jackson of Beloit, Wis., a Camp Grant workman, who shot himself in the head, dying instantly.

No motive has been found for the shooting and authorities Friday night expressed belief Jackson was deranged.

Hundreds of Camp Grant army men and officers and Rockford citizens saw the double killing, which took place in the business section.

According to witnesses, Jackson emerged from the crowd and opened fire on Gillogly when three feet from him. Before the police could interfere Jackson turned the revolver on himself.

Lieutenants found on Jackson and in his trunk identify him as a former resident of Monroe and Beloit, Wis.

A note in his pocket told of his intention to kill his wife in Beloit and himself and his desire to kill "Marion Graves" whom the note said, was the cause of all the trouble.

Mrs. Jackson and Marion Graves, her sister, were in Rockford, Friday night. They declared Jackson had threatened them for several days after having demanded money from his wife. Friday night, as they emerged from a store, they met Jackson. He fired one shot and pierced Mrs. Jackson's hat, and then shot Patrolman Gillogly and himself.

MORE THAN $30,000 YESTERDAY'S RESULT

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO SECOND LIBERTY LOAN IN JANESVILLE ARE NOW MOUNTING RAPIDLY.

PASS $200,000 MARK

Campaigns Throughout the Entire County Are Progressing—Beloit to Raise a Million.

Subscribed yesterday... $30,300. Total to date... $201,200. With more than thirty thousand dollars reported by the four banks as yesterday's contribution to the second liberty loan, the total amount of the city has jumped to beyond the two hundred thousand mark, well over a quarter of that to be raised in Janesville.

There are in sight a number of large subscriptions and in the belief of the campaign leaders, five hundred thousand dollars is easily in sight. While they realize that the raising of the last two hundred and fifty thousand dollars will require great effort, they are confident of ultimate success. Elaborate plans for a canvassing of all territory are being made now as the chief feature of the last two weeks of the campaign.

Though Beloit has not yet started in its active canvass, so perfect is the organization that they now confidently anticipate a million dollars from that city. They will start the drive on the seventh of the month.

Reports from about the county, though they contain no definite statement of figures, indicate greater success than had been contemplated. Especially true is this of Evansville and Madison, where the campaign is progressing rapidly. In the country sections, the plans of organization have occupied most of the time of the local committees, but in many places actual soliciting among the farmers is beginning.

Many meetings have been conducted in the townships and there have been but few gatherings of any size in the country, which the Liberty Loan has not been urged either by local men, or by speakers sent out from the central committee in Janesville.

M. G. Jeffris, director for the county, is preparing circulars, and is sending them to all farmers as part of the publicity campaign, which is using every means to reach the people. Specialized efforts intended to reach certain classes of purchasers will be launched as soon as the main campaign has been completed, and the terms will devote themselves to the task of bringing together the loose ends of the last two weeks.

Who have already purchased bonds, may expect to be solicited for greater subscriptions, and the few who have refused to be canvassed, as well as those who are in sight of raising on a daily average more than forty thousand dollars in order to bring the city's subscriptions up to the allotted amount, are being urged to settle down to the real grind, with the slogan, "Janesville's got to do it," as their working motto.

OVER $900 PROFITS FROM RUMMAGE SALE

Annual Rummage Sale Will Earn Nearly Thousand Dollars for Conduct of Rest Room.

A big success has been scored by the rummage sale, both in the amount of money made and in the quantities of good, serviceable articles which have been distributed to those who needed them. Over $900 has been raised, and the proceeds of the sale will be taken in when the remaining goods are disposed of. About twenty ladies have been on duty all the week, with others coming in to help. The sale has been run on very businesslike principles, having a regular staff to take charge of the various departments of the work. Mrs. F. S. Sheldon has been general manager, Mrs. H. J. T. and Miss Mabel Greenman cashiers. The invoicing clerks were Mrs. Fred Capelle, Mrs. A. E. Matheson, Mrs. Hugh McCoy, Mrs. Stanley Smith and Mrs. O. E. Brien. The committee chairman was Miss Mary Mout, with Mrs. Starr Atwood as a close second. Others were Miss Ida Harris, Mrs. Fernando Cumberlin, Mrs. Sam LeVern, Mrs. H. J. T. and Mrs. F. A. Capelle, Mrs. N. O. Mout, Mrs. Miss Harriet Carle, Mrs. Archie Reid, Mrs. T. O. Howe and others. The trucks furnished by the Sheldon Hardware company and Starr Atwood helped materially in collecting the bulkier things. Father Williamson served as floor walker and general assistant, while Walter Helms was kept busy wrapping bundles. Mrs. C. W. Helms assisted in this duty also. Miss Mary Barker had charge of a very attractive notion department; Miss Agnes Webber had the latest styles of millinery under her charge; Miss Margaret Underhill had charge of the children's suit department. The following corps of ladies assisted as sales women: Mrs. Q. O. Curtis, Mrs. Frank Ryan, Mrs. G. Bridges, Mrs. Wm. H. Smith, Mrs. Frances Hutchinson, Miss Frances Jackson, Miss Harriet Carle, Miss Margaret Jeffris, Mrs. Alice Thomas, Miss Sybil Richardson, Miss Sarah Sutherland, Mrs. T. O. Howe, Mrs. Chas. Sanborn, Mrs. Lou Amerpohl, Miss Doris Amerpohl, Mrs. Percy Munger, Mrs. Cannon, Mrs. Alice Sale, Mrs. J. R. Nichols, Miss Raeline Bostwick and others. George Pickel assisted at the men's clothing department and fitted suits like a veteran salesman. Many merchants generously donated goods from their stocks. Among these were: Ziegler's, Golden Eagle, Simpson's, Mrs. Walker's and Sheldon's hardware store.

The use of the store was generously offered by the Ryan, who was assisted in installing their stock and courteously assisted in telephone messages. The Cudahy market also helped by giving telephone calls. The electric company and the racks for clothing display, loaned by Ziegler's and coat hangers by the Nichols store. The ladies felt well repaid for their hard work by the fact that the rest room will be practically financed for another year. This has been the attempt of the women of the city to support this project, and they hope that the country women may be persuaded to help out in this affair in some way.

Marriage Licenses: Licenses to wed have been issued by John W. Batters and Jessie C. Regan, both of Beloit, and to Charles F. Bernstein and Mary M. Hansberry, also of Beloit.

SIDE LIGHTS on the CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT
Former Manager Burr Robbins
and Later Treasurer of Adam Forepaugh Circuses.

That there is a vast difference in organizing and equipping a big show today compared with that of thirty years ago was plain to be seen among the big shows this summer. During my time with the Adam Forepaugh show it was my business to be in Philadelphia some two or three weeks before the opening of the show. I had what was called "my horse and buggy," which I used to go shopping with every morning, buying material and all kind of equipment for the show, such as blacksmith's materials, ropes and other articles. It was easy work in those days, for I knew just where to go to get the things needed.

We had harnessmakers, blacksmiths and other mechanics around the show. When they would give me an order there never was a question asked for the reason that they knew what was needed around the show. Some three or four days before the opening of the show I would tell Dan Taylor, the host canvasser, that I would like to meet his men at work two days before the show, in order to get their names and give them numbers, for each number had a number on it. When these men would line up in the spring more than 80 per cent of them would come to the ticket wagon with smiles on their faces and say: "Dave, we want to go back on the wagon again," for they were "old-timers," as they were called. The next evening Billy Connors, boss canvasser and host, would line up the men and the percentage of old-timers would even be larger than that of the canvassers, especially among what is known as the big team drivers, and those old men who had been with the show for many years.

Occasionally, for some reason or other, we would get a few big team drivers from the Barnum or Sells circuses, who had been with the show for many years; but the percentage of old-timers with the show for the last year or two was greatly diminished, and in many cases we would lose out to thirty men in a day, so that before the season was over there were comparatively few old-timers with the show.

The bosses in the different departments were only paid to hire and keep a kind of a man to help them out. The largest percentage of old-timers in the departments of the shows were the big team drivers, which they had to have and were willing to pay them the price they asked.

To be sure, the heads of the departments, and especially the general manager, have more or less to do with the keeping of the men. In my time the highest class manager that I ever knew was John A. Forepaugh, nephew of Adam Forepaugh. While he was exacting with his men, he was never unreasonable and was always on the job. He was the first man on the lot in the morning and the last to leave at night. He traveled in a private car with his wife and considered himself a working man with the show, and was a man who naturally drew the working class around him. Many times in the spring when the old-timers would come to the ticket wagon, they would say to me, "Dave, I hope Mr. Johnny will be manager again this year." It is just as hard to my way of thinking, to get a good manager for a circus as it is to get a good, capable bank president.

Charles Gollmar of Baraboo, who until a year ago was one of the proprietors of the Gollmar show, recently won to Jackson, Miss., where he has taken up the management of the Hagenbeck-Wallace show.

That Mr. Gollmar is a capable man in every way goes without saying. He was one of the acting managers of the Gollmar show for many years, and as a result of the services of Mr. Gollmar in securing the services of Mr. Hagenbeck-Wallace show, is to be congratulated for many years.

A fight between a performing lion and Emil Schwyer was a feature on the program of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus in Dallas, Tex., recently. The trouble occurred when one of the lions in the act became unruly. Schwyer fought the beast for fifteen minutes before it would perform its turn. When the audience saw that the trainer had triumphed there was an outburst of applause which was definitely given to the lion. Every seat at the afternoon performance was taken, while at night many people were compelled to stand.

The ladies with all the different shows are doing their "bit" to help out Uncle Sam. The ladies with the Barnum show have formed a knitting club and every day find them knitting for the soldiers. Every few days, or maybe a week, a package is sent to some soldier "somewhere in France." A weekly collection is taken up with the money yarn, cigarettes, tobacco and other useful articles are purchased.

That the circus business is coming back to its own enjoyment and popularity more especially perhaps in the larger cities, was never better shown in circus business than it was this fall. A short time ago the great Barnum & Bailey show gave two performances in Nashville, Tenn., with a big eight-pol' top, the largest one ever raised. All available extra seats were utilized and people were turned away at both performances. A few days later Jess Willard, with the "101" Ranch Buffalo Bill show arrived, and of course thousands of Nashville people were anxious to see the great champion boxer. This show also played in a capacity house in the afternoon and thousands were unable to gain admittance to the evening performance. A few days later the Hagenbeck-Wallace show followed. This show also played to a big business in Nashville. Papers came out and stated without question Nashville could easily stand another show this season, and that the fourth one would be greeted by two large audiences. And even small towns through the southern country have been paragonizing the big shows generously. Towns that heretofore were passed up. Although I have not received the closing dates of all the big shows, the Patterson & Gollmar show closed the season on Oct. 8, after a very successful season, and went into winter quarters at Peola, Kas., the home of Mr. Patterson.

Next week I hope to be able to give you the closing dates of all the big shows and where they will go into winter quarters. To be remodeled and rebuilt for the 1918 season.

Resume of Moving Picture Programs Of The Week

(By Mrs. Abbie Helms.)

The Majestic had for Saturday, its serial story, "The Railroad Raiders." This story had Helen Holmes jump from a bridge span to a moving freight car, and on Sunday Antonio Moreno appeared in "The Son of the Hills." Here he was a poor boy of the class living in the foothills of the south. He rebelled at all treatment to help him, and to the north, where he was befriended by a wealthy mill owner, who helped him through college. He then goes back home to build a model mill, and to find and marry the sweetheart of his youth. As a mid-week offering, W. S. Hart was seen in "The Disciple." In this he was a minister of the gospel, and settled in one of the poorest border towns of the west. He can hardly secure any hearers to his teachings, so he goes into a dance hall and with the persuasion of a gun, gets the inmates to listen to him. His wife is infatuated with a man, who is an educated physician, is made to come and minister to the child. The rugged strength of Hart is shown with great force in this picture. As a later offering, Ethel Barrymore was shown in "The Greatest Power," in which she appeared with usual grace and charm.

The Apollo had the beautiful and popular picture of the life of "Joan the Woman," as their feature for the first part of the week. The play is given a modern meaning when the life of Joan is made an inspiration to a mother soldier of France to lay down his life for his country. Geraldine Farrar has very closely followed the gradual change from the obscure little peasant maid, to the great leaders of armies. The scene where she is received by ridicule in the court and afterward inspires the nobles and even the weak king himself, is a masterpiece of acting. The battle scenes with their antique armament, are carried out with fidelity, and the whole thing is given with a completeness seldom equaled. Miss Farrar herself gives the picture a beauty and power. On Wednesday and Thursday Molly King appeared in "The on the Square Girl." In the opening scenes she was a model in a famous dressmaker's shop at a fashion show. Beautiful gowns are here displayed and a very attractive screen picture is presented. Later Miss Molly is persecuted by a wealthy man who is proved later to be her father and a silly young woman, who is her unknown sister. She is helped and sheltered by the discarded fiancé of the latter, who comes to love and finally marry her. The picture is a very able life, including skating and to bogganing, are shown and the frivolity and evil underlying such a life are depicted.

A pretty tale is told with a quaint charm, by Bessie Barriscale at the Beverly on Sunday and Monday, in "Rorwold Plunge." The scene is laid on an island in that Irish sea, where Bessie is employed in the kitchen of a castle. At the alarm given out that John Paul Jones, in command of "pirates," is coming to raid the island, the inmates of the castle all take flight. Bessie has been longing for excitement, so she concludes to stay, and dressing in some of the fine attire of the guests, she goes to the aid of the men of the castle, who turn out to have been a sweetheart of her youth. Billie Burke, in a most charming and bewitching figure in "The Mysterious Miss Terry." In this she is a first class young lady of fashion, and later takes rooms as Miss Terry and secures work in a hardware store. Here she makes it her business to help any one who needs her assistance. In this way she becomes acquainted with the hero of her story, who is a man of great wealth and start in the world. When some of her co-workers of the store read a wish, they were rarely sure to find it granted. It was a most beautiful and touching little story. "The Demerit," in which Derwent Hall Caine appeared in the novelized hero of his father's story, was given with singular beauty and picturesque effect. The novel, of time scenery, and the customs of the life of Man, were reproduced with fidelity, and the story of the lad who gave a terrible expiation for a crime was given with great vigor and strength.

Temperance Talks

League.)
Premier Hearst on Prohibition.
We have before us the statement of Sir William Hearst, premier of the province of Ontario, of the prohibition in that part of Canada has been beneficial. The statement is in part as follows:

"We have now had twelve months experience of Ontario temperance act, and I am thankful to be able to say that the operation of the law has come up to my greatest expectations. Reports from all parts of the province show the success of the measure as well as the great benefits that are resulting from it. One very gratifying result of the act is the increased efficiency of the workers of this province. The temperance act has been a great help to the workers and their families, and for their employers as well, and is a great thing for the country at a time when all our energies are required to save the empire from destruction."

feel confident as years go by and our people become accustomed to the changed conditions, still better results will ensue. A generation will grow up free from the influence of the open and public sale of intoxicating liquors; the taste and inclination for alcohol will gradually disappear and we will escape the terrible evils with which the excessive use of intoxicants has so long been associated. Not only the first year's operation of the Ontario temperance act must be considered the most difficult and trying one of its existence. Many good people had doubts of the wisdom and practicality of the step. Today those who conscientiously opposed the measure are to be found among its strongest supporters, so that the public sentiment necessary to the proper enforcement of this law is constantly growing, and guarantees alike its efficiency and stability."

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

The remarkable opportunities the screen affords young women of talent, beauty, and, above all, energy, is set forth strikingly in the instance of Carmel Myers, who becomes a star among Bluebird celebrities with the release of J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Astoria's especially written drama "The Dynamite"—made to exploit Miss Myers' capabilities to the very best advantage.

In her particularly happy introduction to the moving picture fraternity through her father's acquaintance with D. W. Griffith—Miss Myers was, indeed, fortunate; but once given her chance the young lady applied herself with such energy and interest that her advancement was a matter of her own accomplishment. She has come to stardom in a remarkably short time.

She is the daughter of a rabbi who has a worldwide reputation as an authority on Chaldean affairs. While D. W. Griffith was filming his multiple reeler, "Intolerance," he sought information of Miss Myers' father, and in this way she became acquainted with the director. Shortly afterward she found herself at work at the Fine Arts Studio.

She declared that she was willing to play "atmosphere" for two years, if necessary, to gain experience. However, in less than two months after her first day at the studio she was given a good opportunity, which she immediately improved.

Following her appearance in minor positions, she was given more important roles and was numbered among the principals in "Might and the Man" and "A Love Sublime" productions of the Fine Arts series, and in "The Haunted Pajamas," a recent Metro feature. Those in authority at Universal City, Cal., regard Miss Myers' work with great interest and approval, and these features had been exhibited, and a contract was soon arranged.

Three generations of one family in a single play is believed to establish a record in the world of motion pictures.

In "Life's Whirlpool," a new Metro picture, in which Ethel Barrymore is starred, Hazel Drouant, Hazel Drouant and Richard Orr are cast.

Hazel Drouant is the mother of three-year-old Richard Orr, whose artistic work caused Lionel Barrymore, the director and a man with unlimited stage and screen experience, to predict an exceptionally bright future for him.

His grandmother is Electa Drouant, which Lionel Barrymore wrote as well as directed, revolve around Ethel Barrymore and little Richard Orr.

Verna Mercereau is the name of a new actress who has been added to the Universal forces. She is not a sister of Violet Mercereau, nor in any way related to the golden-haired Bluebird star.

Real, regular movie actors in the flesh appeared on the stage at Myers Theatre last evening, people that you know; have read about and seen in the silent theatres.

Good comedy was injected, speeches made by the movie actors, questions answered and explanations of the moving picture business given.

In addition to the above some motion pictures were shown, comedies and new feature.

Paris Postwomen.
Paris, France, is putting its entire mail distribution system into the hands of women carriers. Experiments in two districts proved highly successful, so the plan is to be made general. Women made the rounds faster and delivered more mail in less time than men. Women carriers are to have a severely plain special uniform and are to be paid $1.19 a day more than men received before the war.

Difference in Bread Making.
Little Oscar called on a neighbor's boy one morning and was invited in to wait for his friend, who was not quite ready. The neighbor was kneading bread and asked: "Does your mother make bread?" "Yes," replied Oscar, "only she don't play with it like you do."

"You have no heart! No heart!" she exclaimed again.
She has been beautiful once, but care, worry and poverty had left hard stern lines in her face.
"No, madam, no heart, but we've some very good liver that just came in, replied the butcher, apologetically.

Sorry He Spoke.
"Aren't you wearing your trousers too short, sonny?"
"No, dad, I'm wearing them too long. I just came in to ask you to buy me a new pair."—Browning's Magazine.

CHAPTER X.

On the Summit of the Bluff.

Securely screened from observation by the low growing bushes clinging to the edge of the bluff, and yet with a clear view of the cleft in the rocks half way to the river, D'Artigny found me a sort of a hummock of grass, and remained standing himself. The sun was sinking low, warning us that our time was short, for with the first coming of twilight I would certainly be sought, if I failed to return to the lower camp.

"You would question me, monsieur," I asked doubtfully. "It was for that you led me here?"

"Yes." Instantly aroused, by my voice, but with eyes still scanning the trail, "And there is no time to waste, if I am to do my part intelligently. You must return before the sun disappears, or Monsieur Cassion might suspect you had lost your way. You have sought me for assistance, counsel perhaps, but this state of affairs has so taken me by surprise that I do not think clearly. You have a plan?"

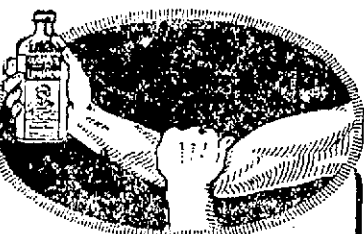

"Scarcely that, monsieur. I would

"IN A BAD WAY"

Many a Janesville Reader Will Feel Grateful for This Information

If your back gives out; becomes lame, weak or aching; if urinary troubles set in; perhaps your kidneys are "in a bad way."

Donan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys. Local evidence proves their merit.

Local evidence proves their merit. Z. W. Roberts, 222 Park street, Janesville, says: "For years I had trouble from the way my kidneys acted. I had to get up at night and in the mornings I felt all tired out. My back ached and I had sore spots over my kidneys. I could hardly straighten after stooping over. Donan's Kidney Pills relieved the pains and put my kidneys in fine shape."

ascertain the truth, and my only means of doing so is through a confession," by Francois Cassion. Arrogant he is, and conceited, deeming himself admired and envied by all, especially his sex. He has even dared boast to me of his victims. But therein lies his very weakness; I would make him love me.

He turned now, and looked searchingly into my face, no glimpse of a smile in the gray eyes.

"Pardon: I do not understand," he said gravely. "You seek his love?"

I felt his manner a rebuke, a questioning of my honesty, and swift indignation brought the answering words to my lips.

"And why not pray! Must I not defend myself—and what other weapons are at hand? Do I owe him kindness; or tender consideration? The man married me as he would buy a slave."

"You may be justified," he admitted regretfully. "Yet how is this to be done?"

I arose to my feet and stood before him, my face uplifted, and, with one hand, thrust aside the shade of my hat.

"Monsieur, deem you that impossible?"

His lips parted in a quick smile, revealing the white teeth, and he bowed low, flinging his hat to the ground and standing bareheaded.

"Mon dieu! Not Monsieur Cassion is to be congratulated. Yet it was my thought you said yonder that you despised the man."

"I do; what reason have I to feel otherwise? Yet there lies my strength in this battle. He laughs at women, plays with them, breaks their hearts. It is his pride and boast, and his success in the past has ministered to his self-conceit. He thought me of the same kind, but has already had his lesson. Do you not know what that means to a man like him? More than ever he will desire my favor. A week back he cared nothing; I was but a plaything, awaiting his pleasure; his wife to be treated as he pleased. He knows better now, and already his eyes follow me as though he were my dog."

"And that then is why you send for me—that I may play my part in the game?"

I shrugged my shoulders, yet there was doubt in my eyes as I faced him. "Is there harm in such play, monsieur?" I asked innocently. "With so important an end in view? 'Tis not that I seek amusement, but I must find out where this king's pardon is hidden, who concealed it, and obtain proof of the fraud which compelled my marriage. My only hope of release lies in compelling Francois Cassion to confess all he knows of this foul conspiracy. I must possess the facts before we return to Quebec."

"But of what use?" he insisted. "You will still remain his wife, and your property will be in his control. The church will hold you to the marriage contract."

"Not if I can establish the truth that I was deceived, defrauded and married by force. Once I have the proofs in my hands I will appeal to Louis—to the pope for relief. These men thought me a helpless girl, friendless and alone, ignorant of law, a mere waif of the frontier. Perhaps I was, but this experience has made me a woman."

"In punishment for his sins; in payment for those he has ruined. At! 'Tis a duty I shall not shrink from, Monsieur d'Artigny, even although you may deem it unwomanly. I do not mean it so, nor hold myself timid for the effort. Why should I? I but war against him with his own weapons, and my cause is just. And I shall win, whether or not you give me your aid. How can I fail, monsieur? I am young and not ill to look upon; this you have already confessed; here in this wilderness I am alone, the only woman. He holds me his wife by law, and yet knows he must still win me. There are months of loneliness before us, and he will not look upon the face of another white woman in all those leagues. Are there any French of my sex at Fort St. Louis?"

"No."

"Nor at St. Ignace, Pere Allouez assures me. I shall have no rival then in all this wilderness; you think me harmless, monsieur? Look at me, and say."

"I do not need to look; you will have your game. I have no doubt, although the final result may not prove what you desire."

"You fear the end?"

"It may be so; you play with fire, and although I know little of women, yet I have felt the wild passions of men in lands where there is no restraint of law. The wilderness sees many tragedies—fierce, bitter, revengeful deeds—and 'tis best you use care. 'Tis my belief this Francois Cassion might prove a devil, once his heart was tricked. Have you thought of this?"

I had thought of it, but with no merriment in my heart, yet as D'Artigny spoke I felt the ugliness of my threat more acutely, and, for an instant, stood before him white-lipped and ashamed. Then before me arose Cassion's face, sarcastic, supercilious, hateful, and I laughed in scorn of the warning.

"Thought of it?" I exclaimed, "yes, but for that I care nothing. Why should I, monsieur? Has the man shown mercy to me that I should feel regret because he suffers? As to his revenge, death is not more to be dreaded than a lifetime passed in his presence. But why do you make plea on his behalf—the man is surely no friend of yours?"

"I make no plea for him," he answered, strangely sober, "and claim no friendship. Any enemy to La Salle is an enemy to Rene d'Artigny; but I would front him as a man should. It is not my nature to do a deed of treachery."

"You hold this treachery?"

"What else? You propose luring him to love you, that you may gain confession from his lips. To attain this end you barter your honesty, your womanhood; you take advantage of your beauty to enslave him; you count as ally the loneliness of the wilderness; ay, and, if I understand aright, you hope through me to awaken the man's jealousy. Is this not true?"

I drew a quick breath, my eyes staring into his face, and my limbs trembling. His words cut me like a knife, yet I would not yield, would not even acknowledge their truth.

"You are unjust, unfair," I burst forth impetuously. "You will see but the one side—that of the man. I cannot fight this battle with my hands, nor will I submit to such wrong without struggle. He has never thought to spare me, and there is no reason why I should show him mercy. I wish your good will, monsieur, your respect, but I cannot hold this plan which I propose as evil. Do you?"

He hesitated, looking at me with such perplexity in his eyes as to prove his doubt.

"I cannot judge you," he admitted at last, "only that is not the way in which I have been trained. Neither will I stand between you and your revenge nor have part in it. I am your friend—now, always. In every honorable way I will serve you and your cause. If Cassion dares violence or insult he must reckon with me, though I faced his whole company. I pledge you this, but I will not play a part or act a lie even at your request."

"You mean you will not pretend to care for me?" I asked, my heart leaden at his words.

"There would be no pretense," he answered frankly. "I do care for you, but I will not dishonor my thought of you by thus deliberately scheming to outwit your husband. I am a man of the woods, the wilderness; not since I was a boy have I dwelt in civilization, but in all that time I have been companion of men to whom honor was everything. I have been comrade with Sieur de la Salle, with Henri de Tonty, and cannot be guilty of an act of treachery, even for your sake. Perchance my code is not the same as the perfumed gallants of Quebec—yet it is mine, and learned in a hard school."

He went on quietly, "There are two things I cannot ignore—one is, that I am an employee of this Francois Cassion, pledged to his service by my own free will; the other is, that you are his wife, joined to him by Holy church, and although you may have assumed those vows under coercion, your promise is binding. I can but choose my path of duty and abide therein."

His words hurt, angered me; I lacked power of expression, ability to grasp his full meaning and purpose.

"You—you desert me then? You—you leave me to this fate?"

"I leave you to reconsider your choice of action," he returned gravely, his hat still in hand, his lips unsmiling. "I do believe your womanhood will find a better way to achieve its liberty, but what that way is I must trust you to discover. I am your friend, Adele, always—you will believe that?"

I did not answer; I could not, because of the choking in my throat, yet I let him grasp my hand. Once I raised my eyes to his, but lowered them instantly in strange confusion. Here was a man I did not understand, whose real motives I could not fathom. His protest had not yet penetrated my soul, and I felt toward him an odd mixture of respect and anger. He released my hand and turned away, and I stood motionless as he crossed the open space between the trees. At the edge of the bluff he paused and glanced about, lifting his hat in gesture of farewell. I do not think I moved or made response, and an instant later he was gone.

I knew not how long I stood there staring into vacancy, haunted by regret, tortured by fear and humiliation. Slowly all else crystallized into indignation, with a fierce resolve to fight on alone. The sun sank, and all about me clung the purple twilight, yet I did not move. He had been unjust, unfair; his simple code of the woods could not be made to apply to such a situation as this of mine.

I heard no sound of warning, yet as I turned to retrace my way to the camp below I became suddenly aware of the presence of Cassion.

"And what happened?" asked the listener.

"They kept right on," said Mr. Tarkington. "The widow knew the way."

"Don't miss Westminster Abbey in London," said a Scot.

There is an anaconda which arrived recently and has since steadily refused to take food of any kind, an example of abstention surpassed, however, by an Indian python, which during its thirteen months' stay has not voluntarily taken food.

SAYS STATE SHOULD SURVIVE THE SHAME

ELLIS USHER BELIEVES LA FOLLETTE BLOT CAN BE WIPE OUT.

LOYALTY IS ASSURED

From One End of the State to the Other—Loyalty Legion Reserves Support of All Citizens.

(By Ellis B. Usher.)
Milwaukee, Oct. 12.—While the adjournment of congress is not a local matter, Wisconsin occupied such an unavoidable prominence during its last days that it is easily the foremost topic for this paper. A Wisconsin man who was there all last week said to me: "I was asked at every turn, 'Does La Follette really represent Wisconsin?' and everywhere, from the streets and hotel lobbies to the vaudeville theaters, one's ears were unobscuredly conscious of the fact that it is no laughing matter, this reputation for disloyalty. It is striking at Wisconsin in a way that will cost many a long day of effort to recover. It is already affecting Wisconsin business and Wisconsin must recognize the necessity of effort to counteract this pervasive sentiment of antagonism or it will suffer permanent harm. Mr. La Follette is a man and a politician. He comes back and asks: 'What if your public men misrepresent you, how did they get off?'"

Loyalty Legion.
Wisconsin cannot do better than "get busy" with the Loyalty Legion. This organization has just elected Judson C. Rosenthal of Appleton president and it is anxious to organize the patriotic men, women and children for affirmative, aggressive action. Mr. Rosenthal is a man of education, wide experience and travel, and a man who is not afraid of large crowds. I am assured by his friends that his ambition is that of every good citizen. He would stamp out treason in Wisconsin, and under the ever-whispering loyal sentiment of this state to back the government and prosecute the war. He is not a politician and there will be no politics in the membership or management of the organization.

People Confident in Government.
To return to congress, it was a session of great accomplishments and a remarkable harmony of action. The more objective it was, the more effective. It was a session that demonstrated the confidence of the American people in the president and the government most emphatically.

There are some remarkable instances of self-restraint and good judgment for which President Wilson has had no credit, which should be noted by the American people, not alone for justice to Mr. Wilson, but for the encouragement of that feeling of public safety that only comes in popular confidence that the country has a wise and calm national leader. Nothing has so impressed thoughtful observers with his poise and assurance of the public policy as his handling of the campaign of incitement and panic during last week's testing campaign. He knew, as many of the rest of us did, that Senator Lodge and some others were plotting to bring about a premature election, and he met the situation with a calmness and a wisdom that was the work of the type of misleader, and it still lingers in the public mind, so thoroughly was it planned. The campaign was a success before of since election, justified in it. It is now used only by pro-Germans to assist the pretense that he has betrayed them.

Wasted No Time.
But these misrepresentations in his own camp, with annoying, were shallow and Mr. Wilson was not tempted to waste time upon them. He was not other people's friends, but most tested his powers of leadership and best demonstrated his clarity of mind and the right purpose, that he would not let such a campaign of incitement and panic put upon him. I refer to the great pressure put upon Mr. Wilson to expose the German plotters and give the public some idea of the treachery of the pro-Germans and the virtual treason of many American citizens. Most of the evidence was in his hands two years ago. His friends urged that upon such an exposure, the republican campaign would collapse. The view will not be doubted today with knowledge we now have. I was in New York in April, and in Washington on May 17 and 18, 1916, when the German note that came on the fifth and that side-stepped, for the time being, the only submarine issue. Everywhere among the president's close friends there was knowledge, more or less complete, of the nefarious intrigues in the country. So well disseminated was this information, that I, who was not on public or even newspaper business, heard it, and learned much of the inner workings of the German plot, and many details as to the character of the documents taken. Yet it is but recently that the public has had any official suggestion of the character of the German efforts to intrigue us into war with Japan and Mexico, for these German plotters have before left the White House. But Mr. Wilson rested his case with the American people and was right. The lesson is now plain that he established a confidence in his own high purpose, which accounts for the comfortable support he has had in the congress that just adjourned, during which he has had no stouter friend than the leaders of the republican party and senate. It is, after all, worth while to believe in the justice of American public opinion and in the sincerity of American patriotism.

An illustration.
In line with this thought I want to quote from a friend who recently visited Washington, and met Major Guy D. Goff of this city, who is now in the office of General Crowder, the assistant general and provost marshal of the army. My friend told me of the men employed in that office, to illustrate the sort of work that the government is doing in all departments. Major Wignone, dean of the Chicago law school, Major Scott, professor of international law at Columbia, Major Davis and Colonel Ansel, professors of law at West Point, are in active service here, for the duration of the war. Colonel Kregger, Colonel White and Major Spiller, all West Point graduates, have been called forth with new vigor to have charge of the preliminary appellate review of court martial cases. These men are working from 8:00 a. m. to midnight, and the day concludes with a general discussion of the cases of the day's cases with General Crowder in the chair. This remarkable gathering of some of the greatest legal authorities in law, from the leading universities of the land for this special service, is, my friend assures me, but one of the illustrations to be found everywhere in Washington, of the absence of politics and the attention to the one absorbing purpose of winning the war.

Hoard's Birthday.
The eighty-first birthday of ex-Governor W. D. Hoard, on Wednesday, was an event of importance to all good citizens. Gov. Hoard is quite feeble in body but his mind is clear and vigorous and his patriotism has no alloy. One of the men who actively aided in his defeat for re-election as governor, on "the Bennett law issue," that question now, to some extent, but the German Lutheran clergy have, of late, been doing what they could to convince him that his faith in the influence of free institutions was too much tainted with idealism, and that the English language has not had the aggressive protection it required in Wisconsin. I admit with respect for all German protagonists in Wisconsin, that I judged them too leniently and too hopelessly 27 years ago, and they have, in large measure, failed with their friends and justified Governor Hoard and his supporters. He is today, as he was then, a fearless American patriot, while many of my co-workers against him are open to antagonism to the government that has sheltered them and offered them all they know of individual and religious freedom. Governor Hoard is an honor to himself and to Wisconsin.

HOW A RAIL AGENT HELPS HIS COUNTRY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., Oct. 13.—I registered myself and forty others for selective draft June 5, without one cent cost to the government. I am myself, wife and child have become members of the Red Cross. I have secured in this place and surrounding country fifty-two members of the State National chapter of the American Red Cross and collected nearly $100.

I have purchased a liberty bond and induced several others to buy bonds. I have impressed upon shippers the necessity of loading cars to full space and weight, and seen to it that they did it. I have urged shippers and consignees to load and unload cars with all the speed possible. I am using small and light cars for light loading.

NEW FEATURES IN LATEST BLUE BOOK

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., Oct. 13.—The feature of the new Blue Book, first copies of which were sent to members of the legislature today, is the full description of the new Wisconsin state capital. The extended article is prefaced by a list of views taken from the inside of the capitol, special attention being given to the paintings. The Blue Book is issued on odd numbered years. This year's volume of 300 copies of the volume are presented to each member of the legislature for free distribution among their constituents. There has been considerable delay in the printing of the volume, two years ago the Blue Book came from the press in June.

Another feature of this year's book is an article on the health of the state with a graphic chart that explains fully causes of death from preventable diseases. In this volume has been incorporated a short but rather complete description of all of the state parks. The general data included in the volume are: The constitutions of the United States and Wisconsin; census data on Wisconsin's election figures for Wisconsin; list of all papers published in the state; a brief sketch of the department of government and the duties it performs; historical data on the organization of Wisconsin territory, with a short history of the progress of the state. The volume is compiled and published under direction of the Wisconsin industrial commission.

BADGER VETERANS OFF FOR VICKSBURG

Madison, Wis., Oct. 13.—The civil war veterans are off for Vicksburg to attend the peace jubilee there next week. The Wisconsin contingent composed of 367 left the state this afternoon and will arrive in Vicksburg tomorrow. The official delegation from Wisconsin accompanying the veterans includes former Governor W. H. Upham, Marshfield; Major D. S. McArthur of La Crosse; and A. P. Croft, representing the adjutant general's office.

The reunion has been in planning a long time. Congress appropriated $100,000 for the purpose. The California, $15,000; Illinois, $30,000; New York, $17,500; Iowa, $40,000; Nebraska, $20,000; Pennsylvania, $10,000 and Arkansas, $5,000. The state of Wisconsin appropriated a sum sufficient to pay the expenses of all veterans, residents of the state, whose regiments participated in the Vicksburg campaign which came to a conclusion in July 1863. The state of Wisconsin has several monuments on the field.

A Shallow Excuse.

TROOP'S PROGRESS AT CAMP GRANT IS SWEEPING SUCCESS

Rockford, Oct. 13.—After one month of military camp training, reports compiled by regimental commanders in Camp Grant and footed up in division headquarters, offer evidence that the national training program is a sweeping success. Despite the volume of pessimism marking its inception, selective service in action is reaching lengths undreamed of by veteran officers who daily are seeing their military dreams worked out in every detail.

Nearly fifty percent has been clipped from the period of time it required to teach the first five percent of honor men in Camp Grant the rudiments of drill by the progress of the second contingent, while the third contingent—the only third contingent now housed in any western camp—is advancing in like proportion. Credit for the division showing has been given in great part to reserve officers. Veterans in the training city declare that never in the history of the American army seen so versatile and competent a body of subalterns in like numbers. Not a single reduction in rank has resulted from the first training month in camp. Complete guard duty has been added to the program without friction and the Eighty-Sixth division has reached maximum speed in its intensive training race.

The new camp has wrought results with most of the selective fighters that are plain to the most casual observer. The men have learned that nature, stripped of artificial bonds, is the greatest sporting adversary that ever offered a daily challenge. Instead of seeking a radiator these past, cold days, Sammy has battled the frost in the open. Instead of stooping under heavy clothing, he meets the chill more than half way. He plays leapfrog by the regimental miles, swings through hours of scientific exercise and feels the keen delight of swelling muscles and perfect health. Indigestion is past history in Camp Grant, and food is a vital factor.

In this connection the most interesting result of the military fight against high prices comes from the division school for bakers and cooks, where chefs are being trained for the army. Itemized mess accounts kept by Captain Charles Barry, who is in command of the unit show that the best of food can be secured through the great buying power represented in an infantry company, at an individual cost of 62 1/2 cents per day. Here is the menu prepared and devoured joyously by the chefs themselves, thirty thousand enlisted men and members of the Quartermaster corps for Sunday dinner, October 7.

BRITISH UNCOVER A SLACKER TRUST

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
London, Sept. 27. (By mail).—The war office has uncovered a unique method of evading military service. When Sidney Drew, a young commission merchant, was arrested another charge he was found to have a certificate of exemption certifying that he was a hunchback. He admitted that a group of men had hired a hunchback to present himself for each of them as their summons came to procure exemption certificates. Meantime the hunchback had joined the navy and drowned in a ship sunk by a submarine. The war office is searching for the other members of the evading group.

German Slavery or LIBERTY BOND

Think of the Bondage of Belgium When You Buy U. S. Liberty Bonds

If we do not win this war, say good-bye to Liberty. Say good-bye to all that has made it possible for you to carve your own destiny unhampered by caste or class, to make a home for yourself and your family under a government founded by men who would not submit to the will of a despot on his throne across the water.

If the United States fails in its purpose, bend your neck and prepare to take on the yoke. Get ready for a bondage that will wring from you ten times, a hundred times, what the Government is asking you to invest in U. S. Liberty Bonds.
